INSTALLATION + WORKSHOP + DISCUSSION

Green Gazing | Ashley Bowa + Lesley Marshall

Saturday, February, 29th
12 pm – 5 pm: Exhibition
2 pm: Workshop / performance
3 pm: Discussion
At Studio XX

"Green Gazing unfolds in multiple acts, asking: what does it mean to embody a liberation movement? By translating biofeedback (the measured electrical signals of plant processes) into data, then image, graph, music, or movement, the artists cast learning back through the sensing body. Technology becomes a translation tool—though harrowed by its own contributions to environmental degradation and resource depletion, it also forms a common bridge to allow humans to visualize their co-creation with plant life." – Joy Xiang

EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITY | Green Gazing

Artists / facilitators : Lesley Marshall + Ashley Bowa

Sunday, March 1st
1 pm – 4 pm
At Studio XX

In this VJing and yoga-inspired movement workshop participants will explore different ways of measuring plant life and energy, and will respond with expressive movement. After an introduction to plant identification, participants will make a short video and collect information about their plants using pH meters, drawing tools, and more. With these videos and the collected data, they will develop both live projections and plant-life inspired movements.

This educational activity is reserved for teenagers or children accompanied by an adult. To register, contact mediation@studioxx.org before February 27th! Please indicate the name and age of the participants.
